Album and song to Rosalía, record to Milo J.

At the 27th Latin Grammy Awards on Thursday, Nov. 12, at the MGM Grand Garden Arena in Paradise, Nevada, Rosalía's Lux (Complete Works) won Album of the Year, and "La Perla", her song with Yahritza y Su Esencia, won Song of the Year. Record of the Year went to "Niño" by Milo J, and Best New Artist to Aria Vega.

The two big song awards reward different people. Song of the Year goes to the songwriters; "La Perla" credits five, Rosalía with Noah Goldstein, David Rodríguez, Ryan Tedder and Dylan Wiggins. Record of the Year goes to a recording's performers, producers and engineers. Edgar Barrera, the nominations leader with 10 for the second time, had two songs in the Song of the Year field, "Coleccionando Heridas" and "Mi Gran Amor"; neither won.

Rosalía's Lux wins Album of the Year.

Lux beat nine other albums, among them Karol G's Tropicoqueta, Anitta's Equilibrivm, Jorge Drexler's Taracá and Milo J's own La Vida Era Más Corta. The show aired on Univision and streamed on Vix and HBO Max, with Roselyn Sánchez hosting for the tenth time.

FILM · THIS WEEKEND

Two new openings, one well-reviewed holdover.

Two new films open in the U.S. today, Friday, Nov. 13. Ebenezer: A Christmas Carol, from Paramount, is a wide theatrical release and Ti West's version of the story, with Johnny Depp as Scrooge. How to Rob a Bank, from Amazon MGM Studios, is David Leitch's heist film with Nicholas Hoult and Zoë Kravitz; its Wikipedia page gives the U.S. date but not the release type.

Critics are cool on both, according to the aggregates on their Wikipedia pages. Rotten Tomatoes counts 53% of 83 reviews as positive for Ebenezer and 33% of 63 for How to Rob a Bank; Metacritic scores them 46 and 47, both in its "mixed or average" band.

AGENT ANALYSIS
THE READ

The best reviews belong to last week's film.

Of the three films this issue checked, the best-reviewed is the one already playing. Godzilla Minus Zero, released by GKIDS on Nov. 6, has 91% of 194 reviews positive on Rotten Tomatoes, a 74 on Metacritic and an A from CinemaScore's audience survey. Its Wikipedia page puts its U.S. and Canada gross at $39.1 million, after a $30.6 million opening that set a record for a live-action foreign-language film.

Reviews do not set grosses, and a Christmas story and a star-led heist can draw crowds critics did not send. The useful question for Sunday's estimates is narrower: whether a foreign-language film in its second weekend stays ahead of Ebenezer, a new English-language wide release. The record opening says the audience exists; the second weekend will show how much of it was a first-week rush.
